

NEWS LETTER NO 16

Update 4/9/2013 Remich Marina

I like travelling on ferry's but they do eat up time, its ok if you are like us and dedicate the day to it, but if you are short on time the Tunnel is far better.

We were thinking how many times we have crossed into Europe in the last 10 years. I think it is over 35 times. (I should know the way by now)

ADVENTURE BEFORE DEMENTIA

We are spending a couple of days at a camper stop in a marina near Remich on the river Mosell in Luxenbourg. Its great here cheap tobacco, cheap alcohol and the Diesel is only 1.26 Euro (£1.08 approx)

The garages on the borders like Remich are so busy in the following image there are 8 garages all together and the fuel prices are fixed by the government, they also sell cartons of cigarette

Update 6/9/2013 Lindah on Bodensee

(that's Lake Constance to you and me)

The old part of town is on an island connected by a road and rail bridge. It is the main rail station for this part of Germany, with ferry connections to Switzerland and Austria. It's a very old and picturesque town hence it is very busy.

Camper Bit

Location, location, location. In Lindau they reserve a car park for campers to stay overnight for a mere 20 Euro with no services. On our 2nd night there were 52 motor-homes (yes I was sad enough to go out and count them)

Update 7/9/2013 Leutasch valley Austria

(near Seefeld)

Dislike of the day

A stop go que for over an hour then it clears and you get going without knowing WHY?

Like of the day

Driving through Bavaria and the Austrian Tirol the scenery is fantastic.

The Leutasch valley and Seefeld is an area we know well from our cross country skiing days (when we were a lot younger). It's a flat valley 4000ft above sea level above Innsbruck, with good sized mountains either side.
