News letter no 49

Update 28/5/2015 Brittany Atlantic coast.

Yippee, My first ice cream cornet of the year. (pity its not Italian)

The Gulf of Morbihan, is a large bay with a narrow entrance, with over 40 islands of which the two largest have villages on them.

It's the sailing Mecca of France, there are thousands of Yachts, moored in every bay or inlet, one of the main inlets goes up to the city of Vannes with over 2km of yachts on this one inlet alone.

Apart from sailing Vannes is a medieval city, with some lovely gardens.

Like of the day.

A local optician replacing a screw in my specs free of charge even though they new we were tourist's, and would not be a future customer.

Camper bit.

A normal holiday you can take enough clothes for the trip, but the length of time we are away we have to have washing days, most sites have washing machines.

But when the weather is bad the camper can look like a laundry.

Like of the day.

Walking 10 miles along the Brittany Atlantic coast, through rocky coves and sandy bays and only seeing 20 people all day.

Laxative of the day

Taking the wrong turn on the scooter and ending up on a motorway, they say it can do 80mph, but at 60 it feels like you are sat on the wing of a jumbo jet.

Shopping.

You can get half a trolley load of supermarket food in the Vespa, that includes the 5 bottles of wine that are in my bag with the bread which hangs on a special bag hook.

On the same site as us was a young family with there split screen camper van with matching caravan.

The kids slept in the caravan with the parents in the van, with an awning strung between.
