Update 24/8/2015 west country

Weston Super Mare.

Is a typical British sea side resort, but it lacks a council parks and garden dept.

Like of the day

*We are at a Certified location just outside
W.S.M. on a hard standing pitch in an apple orchard.*

Like of the day EVEN MORE.

It's a cider farm.

Bridgewater.

Here we are on another certified location and this one has Alpacas.

Dislike of the day.

Waking up to the grunting of 2 Alpacas having it off. A bit too much input before my first cup of tea.

Bridgewater.

We went for the day, after an hour not finding much of interest we returned to the camp-site. I looked in the Bridgewater tourist guide and under things to do were.

- a) Mecca bingo
- b) Somerset brick museum
- c) Cue snooker club.

I say no more.

Little Gem.

4 miles outside of Bridgewater are the Walled Gardens of Cannington. It was a 12th century priory and is now a part of Bridgewater College horticultural dept. In fact it is like a small Kew gardens, with lots of tropical plants growing outside due to the wall and the warmer climate down here (tropical monsoon)

Minehead

Is a lot better than the name makes you think, it is not just the Butlins of the West, it has a very attractive high st.

A very pretty harbour and point, which is the start of the west coast way (600 miles)

The main tourist attraction is the West Somerset railway. I have a model of one of these Hall class 4-6-0 (I am now an official train nerd)

2 miles away is the very attractive castle and village of Dunster.

Accident

The other day Wendy while getting out of the camper in bare feet caught her little toe on the heel of a shoe. There was a loud crack and a big gasp, we think Wendy broke here little toe. But I fixed it.

Both patient and doctor are doing well.
